Have you been wanting to take your art supplies outside to sketch, but...

you are hesitant about what supplies to bring and how best to carry them? Feel you need more drawing skills and/or you are just learning to use watercolor? Generally shy about sketching outside?

Join Pam for a fun, instructional day sketching Lowcountry late autumn beauty at Widgeon Point Preserve. On site demonstrations are followed by in-the-field sessions, structured for students to create journal pages while receiving one-on-one guidance/instruction from Pam. Pack a lunch! The day concludes with a show and tell, featuring pages created along with guidance for the next steps needed in the continuation of sketching plein air.

We'll be Walking and Sitting - Please read:

Widgeon Point Preserve contains 162 acres of mixed pine-hardwood forest, maritime forest and salt marsh along the Broad River. A 0.7 mile hiking trail follows along the perimeter of the park. It's a well maintained trail and provides easy walking. There is a bird blind overlooking a freshwater pond and a covered picnic area that has a few tables. There are port-a-jons, but no inside restroom facilities. There is no guarantee that the picnic area will be available for our use, as it's first come first serve. However, I think we may be able to use it some :)
